NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Nearly everybody has a chance to do right every day.

Over in Henry County they keep the political pot boiling all the time. They never know when it will be needed.

The lawns have been green in Dothan nearly all the winter, but they are looking extra well just now, and the hard breathing of a lawn mower can be heard in the distance every day.

It is understood among newspaper readers that what the paper says may be just one man's idea, and imperative. One might live a hundred years without doing a single thing the editor advises.

We would like to know, without having to delve too much, just when men first began to wear pants. We want to look up the files of some of the daily papers of that time and see what comments the paragraphers made in that day.

It is the object of this paper to please as many readers as is consistent with the management. We don't expect to please all—not right away, but objections are filed, from time to time they will have due consideration. When you don't think we are running the paper right, don't hesitate to say so, if you have a suggestion. A kick without a remedy is a poor kick.

MODERN MEANS OF LOCOMOTION

No doubt the first time a man got on a two-wheeled chariot some fellow predicted that he'd break his neck fooling with the thing. It looked dangerous, and had no future, the safe and sane element said. The same misgivings were felt, no doubt, about riding the first horse. Man didn't walk up to the animal and mount it the first time he saw it. The thing looked dangerous. When the first sail boat was rigged up no one would ride in it till it was got from off the sandbar, fearing to fly in the face of providence in such manner. Fulton's steam boat project as hazardous, to the laymen, and everybody knew it would get Mr. Fulton into trouble. Then, when the locomotive was given its first tryout and made about the same time a Houston County yoke of steer would make, everybody knew the settlement would soon be called on to turn out and gather up the pieces of the engineer. The railroad in its initial stages was of little practical value, but time and the ever increasing demands of modern civilization have of necessity created such improvements that one is whirled back and forth like a shuttle out of a loom. For the benefit of all of us who have outgrown a conception of grandmother's loom, it might be well to explain that a shuttle is a little baton-shaped piece of hard wood, about ten inches long hollow like a red-horse snicker, with a lot of thread wound inside. This thing is slipped through the loom with one hand, and slapped back with the other, and every time the shuttle goes through, one more thread is put in place, and when this operation has been repeated a million or more times, the cloth is finished. Now don't force us to go into details and tell you what a loom is; ask your Mother or your grandmother. The present generation knows but little about the looms, and the stock of looms that loomed up all over this country forty years ago are now hidden away in the smokehouse or barn, but our children will take them out and dust them up and varnish them and place them in the parlor in the years to come—as they are now doing the beadsteads with the ten foot posts and rope slats—they will be valued as heirlooms; and every family will be going back to the roots of its tree, trying to prove that such and such a one was used by a certain grandmother, or great grandmother, on one side of the house or the other. But to continue with the progressive story.

In spite of the fact that the bicycle in its early stages consisted mainly of a large driving wheel over which the propelling power (man) was obliged to occupy a perilous position, it was a hard matter to persuade the early cyclists, to try the "safety," with its clumsy looking tires and chain gear, but it would be a hard matter to persuade anyone but a circus rider to mount a high-wheeler and risk the breaking of a few front teeth, now.

When the automobile man first informed the world that he had a trap that could be run without a man or horse, carrying its own power, going anywhere a horse and buggy could go, he was not doubted as much as his predecessors were in the field invention; the doubting Thomases had been educated up to a point where they expected almost anything. The limit was reached however, when the man told us about a flying machine; we all saw his finish; we could see the farmers go out and gather up the different parts of his anatomy on a pitch fork from where he had fallen in the field. Since then, a good many of us have seen the things fly, and hear much of them every day.

Along with the introduction of the many other improvements might be considered the thought of how the people wagged their heads over and doubted the telegraph, the telephone, the graphophone, wireless telegraphy.

There may have been several other inventions introduced this week, now that new ones are constantly showing up every day, but the latest is that which promises conversation with the planet Mars—just so soon as ten million dollars can be raised, and if money is all that is lacking, this feat will be accomplished; in this generation a way is found to get the money to do anything that seems worth while. All that is necessary is to convince a few people that it is a great scheme; a stock company can then be formed, bonds floated and a few franking privileges issued, and things will begin to hum.

Many things we can't see into now will come later, dead easy. For instance, we fail to see just how we are to attract attention of the people of Mars and are told that it is to be accomplished by means of the reflections from a large glass. This might be done, but suppose then, Morse's code is not understood in Mars, after we have succeeded in signaling them? If such is the case, must we then wait till they raise ten million dollars up there to answer us? If the inhabitants of that planet are not right up to snuff, unless they have commercial organizations, public enterprises, public-spirited millionaires, we fear that our signal crops will weary of waiting for an answer. However, if Mars is looking for something, has her ears close to the ground and is open at all times to such a proposition, she may catch on to our signals in a remarkably short time, and tell us of the weather they are having.

ing, of their politics, their society, the moral standing of the community—especially on prohibition. Talking to Mars, or her people, doesn't look any more impossible to us now than did the sending of a wireless message a few years ago. We are backing the experiment and will be prepared to give our readers the first conversation held.

Nothing seems impossible now, and even if it does appear so, we are not going to say that it can't be done.

SUNSHINE
Probably we too often forget the effect of Sunshine, we do not interest ourselves in the shining, or the object upon which the rays fall. If our words were shining words and in them that healthful influence which the sunshine carries, our bodies would not be troubled with tired nerves or our stomachs with indigestion. Then the rays going forth from our bodies, setting on others like ourselves, would reflect back to us and beget a state of feeling which would send us into pastures of thought full of green meadows, or orchards, ripe with golden fruit, springs from which when once we drank, our thirst would be fully quenched, and being led in this state in to the valley where the waters are still, we would not worry about some favorite spot of earth, embellished by the hands of man, where the inmates have temporary joy through mirth, appetite and passion, which in the end only spoil their bodies and unfit the mind for the noble purpose for which it was created.

The Embroidery Club Meets With Mrs. Lillian Crawford.

Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock Mrs. Lillian Crawford entertained delightfully for the Embroidery Club at her beautiful new home on West Main street.

The apartments were beautiful with a profusion of roses, palms and ferns. Nearly every member was present and two visitors, Mrs. Ed. Williams and Mrs. Pitt Carlisle.

A most enjoyable afternoon was spent over the dainty handiwork and later a delightful course luncheon was served.

The many friends of Miss Maggie Farmer will be glad to know that she is much better today.

Mrs. Anderson's many friends regret to hear of her continued illness.

J. M. Koonce, of Columbia, was attending court here today.

NEW DAIRY.

Hall Brothers, from James, Ala. who have been engaged in the dairy business there for many years, and who bought a farm near Dothan some time ago, have shipped their cows, and will in a day or so be supplying the public with milk and butter. These people have done away with their dairy at James, and come to Dothan because it looked like a better market. They have gone to considerable expense in fitting up their dairy along sanitary lines, having had a government expert to approve the plans for the model building they erected for their cows. The cows were also examined by the Department of Agriculture of Alabama before they were shipped, that no unhealthy cows might be brought here.

TURK TIRED OF WASHING.

From the Philadelphia Record.

New York, April 24.—"It's said Col. Mesrop Newton, attaché of the Imperial Legation, in speaking of conditions in Turkey today, 'The people are tired of the impurities of the Koran. You will understand this when I tell you that though the Turks are not the cleanest people in the world, they do the most washings. They even lay down laws as to how a Turk must wash his ears, his hands, his hair, his feet and every other part of his body.'

"To wash his ears, for instance, a Turk must put his forefinger in the ears and the thumb on each side of his chin. If he washes in that manner he is 'clean' according to the laws of Mohammed, even though he uses three drops of water and there are just as many minute laws governing every other daily action for the orthodox Turk whose life becomes an intolerable burden according to the Koran.

"The Young Turks are divided into two factions; those who believe that Turks, Greeks and Armenians should all be equal and those who believe that Turks and their religion should be dominant in the government. The Sultan craftily stirred up these two factions against each other and organized the recent revolt.

"The Turks, during the reign of the Sultan, have also endured the most thorough system of graft and spying ever devised. The Sultan, when a man is denounced to him, seizes his property. And he has done so much of this that he has practically established monogamy in Constantinople for the Koran requires that a man shall provide a separate home for each wife. He has made all but his favorites so poor that few Turks can afford more than one wife."

During the spring every one would be benefitted by taking Foley's Kidney Remedy. It furnishes a needed tonic to the kidneys after the extra strain of winter, and it purifies the blood by stimulating the kidneys, and causing them to eliminate the impurities from it. Foley's Kidney Remedy imparts new life and vigor. Pleasant to take. N. H. McCallum.

Mr. F. G. Fritts, Oneonta, N. Y. writes: "My little girl was greatly benefitted by taking Foley's Orino Laxative, and I think it is the best remedy for constipation and liver trouble." Foley's Orino Laxative is best for women and children, as it is mild, pleasant and effective, and is a splendid spring medicine, as it cleanses the system and clears the complexion. N. H. McCallum.

SOMETHING IN IT.

"What are you talking about? A thing can't be a great help and time."

"I don't know. How about a mustard plaster?"—Boston Transcript.

THE DANGER.

Photographer—"Great Scott, man! Can't you look a bit more cheerful?"

Mr. H. Enspeck—"No, sir; not for this picture! I'm to send it away to my wife, who is away on a visit, and if I looked too cheerful she'd take the first train for home."—Chicago News.
